

Artistic Inspirations

Team Kilo - Renato Martin Gonzalez-Tapia, Siddharth Gianey, Denise Garcia, Benjamin Goodman

Problem Statement

Users (i.e. artists) are finding it time consuming and difficult to go out of their way to find new topics and appropriate references. At best they continue to draw, paint, and sculpt based on past influences, stagnating their growth as an artist, and some even choose not to practice. Our solution must provide users a randomly generated topic and appropriate reference materials.

Who is Experiencing the Problem?

Visual artists who want to expand their skills by drawing, painting, sculpting, or creating works based on new influences and topics.

What is the Problem?

Jumping into a new range of topics can be very taxing on an artist and finding reference material to help give the artist an idea of the topic can be time consuming, difficult, and boring.

Where Does the Problem Present Itself?

The problem presents itself when artists don't have the time or motivation to go out of their way to try something new.

Why Does it Matter?

Without practicing a variety of different topics, beginner, and even advanced artists can't improve or maintain their skills.